2		Slave trade was a massive reason as to why so many people decided to move to America. Slavery was a massive thing in which occurred in America. Many people wished for themselves to own a slave. To do this they had to move to America so that they could own a slave for themselves. A reason as to why slavery could have also been a reason to population increase is the fact that there were many people being brought in who were eventually going to become slaves.
		SEEN
		Through America expanding it meant that there were not enough places for people to live in. Through there being limited places some people had to go and live elsewhere. Many refused to do this until the American government forced them into leaving the place that they were living in.

		The expansion of America meant that people were losing out on multiple things. America kept on growing which meant that it became really overcrowded. Through it becoming like this it meant that some people were actually forced out of their homes. These people would have normally

3		The reconstruction of America was put out to try and help African Americans that were living in the country. Although the government tried multiple times to help African Americans they didn't actually achieve in helping them. Everything in which they did was the complete opposite as to what they were trying to achieve.
		Throughout this time in which African people were meant to be helped they still wasn't helped. Many were still being treated unfairly and being made to do things. The removal act helps us understand this. This is through it stating that they were going to try and move African people out of their own homes. This shows that they were really mistreated by the country that they lived in -
	NAQ
		Slavery was still happening this reconstruction didn't improve black people's lives. It can't have done though for many people still being treated like slaves and working for some is not any more. This helps us see that America didn't improve African American lives through slavery being a huge thing in which was happening.

Question Part

	When the reconstruction was set up so many people especially Northern people thought it would be the end of the terrible treatment of black people. Although it was seen as an attempt of an improvement for black people there was no improvement on their lives and still had terrible living conditions.

5	The government of America tried their hardest to force Indians out of certain places. In an attempt to try this they decided to give them new land. This was the plains. The Indians took this opportunity and decided to move onto this land that was being offered to them. Although America gifted this land to the Indians they later tried to retrieve it back.

	The bison was a major thing in keeping the Indians alive they would use every part of the bison. This would provide: shelter, clothing, and food. The Indians would follow the bison's movement and would go where they went. The Indians were dependant on the bison, when America tried to take back the land they had an objective to get to the bison before the Indians and kill the herd or drive them away. The Americans kept on killing the bison which meant it was really difficult for the Indians to live.

Many people wishing to travel across the land in which they lived on to try and get to the gold. The Indians didn't like the thought of other people crossing over their sacred land. When people attempted to do this the Indians would have killed them for trying to do this. This was through it being their own land and no body else's land. This caused tensions as people from all over the world were arriving to look for the gold.

SEEN

The Americans created this tactic of forgetting the bison for a reason. They knew that it would cause a reaction from the Indians. The bison was a major role in all of the events that would have taken place. The Indians wanted the bison and the Americans took the bison away from them.

SEEN

Many of the changes for the Indians were through the bison. The destruction of the bison was the most significant change into all of the terrible things that happened to the Indians. If there was still bison around then they would not have seen a huge change in the lives of the Indians that lived on the plains. Americans took away the bison therefore it could be seen as their fault as to why so many things changed for the Indians.

6	Source A shows us that Hitler was a really patriotic person. Hitler is saying that everything in which he would do would be through trying to help out Germany as a place. Hitler believes that everything that he will do will make Germany a better place than what it has been. This source is really persuasive. This is through it being about all of the amazing things that could happen to Germany if Hitler was in charge. This speech would have been part of the German's propaganda to try and persuade people to change their minds on the Nazi party.

This source focuses on all of the things in which Hitler thought he was going to achieve. It doesn't tell us what he actually did. The night of the long knives is an example of something he did. He saw that many people were opposing his beliefs. Hitler decided to assassinate any opponents that were in the SA. After he did this the army saw the dominance in which he held. This led to Hitler having his own personal army through many being afraid as to what he could do to them.

Saying as much as they possibly could have said. The Germans are trying to get the public on their side. They are saying what people want to hear. This shows that the Germans may have known that they were about to lose so tried their hardest to try and get the public backing them. The Nazis did everything to get citizens to like them. They even offered rewards. In the end they had to say what everyone wanted to hear then say.

Source C shows us the hate that England held over the Germans. The picture shows us that they wanted to get rid of everything that involved the Nazis. The use of the symbol helps this point get across. This is through it showing us that they went really far to try and destroy anything in which would have involved the Nazis. This picture could also help us understand that some English people were disagreeing with what they were doing so they tried to justify their actions by showing that they were attempting to get rid of anything that would have been associated with the Nazi party. England are trying to get the point across that there was a reason as to why they did what they have actually done.

The writer of interpretation D is telling us that now they feel have done extra research into the Nazi party they dislike them. The writer begins by telling us all of the good things in which he feared about the war and what individuals thought about all of the events in which took place during the war. The writer then later goes on to tell us that he had actually found out that the Nazis were awful people that did horrible things. The writer is really amazed to find out that the Nazis used a lot of propaganda. The writer of this interpretation believes that this is the main reason as to why the Nazis had so many followers. We get a sense of shock from the writer when he found out about all of the awful things that Nazis did during the war.

SEEN

The two sources and the one interpretation can be seen as really useful. This is through them all stating different things in which can then lead us to build a bigger picture in our heads. Source B shows us that the Nazis had to end up telling everyone what they wished to hear. Source C shows us the hate that England showed towards the Germans during the war. Interpretation A shows us how an individual feels after doing research on the Nazis. Each one can help us see that the Nazi party was really hated by many people.

SEEN

8 The Nazi party had many ways in which were seen as a way in which they tried to control people. Many of these things would have also be set up to try and change people's viewpoints on every thing in which the Nazis did during the whole of the war. The Nazis wanted to gain a good support from the people who lived in Germany during war. ~~the~~ The main aim for the Nazis were to try and control everyone who lived in Germany. They wanted everyone to believe in what they did.

Question Part

✓ 1

Concentration camps were a massive sign of a way terror was used to try and control people. If you were caught speaking out against the Nazi party and if you were a German citizen they would place you in a concentration camp. This was used as a way of scaring other people. The Nazis didn't want anyone to express their true feelings about them. In a way to do this they opened concentration camps to hold those that spoke out against the Nazi party. This shows us that terror was used to try and make people worry. People knew that if they said one bad thing about the Nazis they would have been placed in this camp. This shows that they held so much control over the people living in Germany.

SEEN

Propaganda was a massive way in which the Germans tried to control other people. Goebbels head of propaganda would have always made speeches in which were trying to change people's minds on the Nazi party. The closing of Jewish shops and burning Jewish books shows us that the Nazi party used propaganda a lot. They would encourage people to follow everything that they would have done. It was also well known that the Nazi party would have given rewards to those who followed the same beliefs as they did. The Nazis made loads of speeches to try and encourage and persuade. They wanted to gain extra support.

SEEN

The Nazis were seen as a violent and aggressive group of people. Kristallnacht is an example of a time in which the Nazis showed aggression. During this time they burnt down Jewish buildings or they would throw bricks through the windows of these buildings. Through the Nazis doing this it led to Jewish people being absolutely terrified of the Nazis. They didn't know what they were going to do to them. This didn't only lead to the Jews being frightened it also led to some Germans being afraid. They thought that the Germans might attack them if they don't follow the same beliefs as the Nazi party did. This led to many following the party through the terror shown by the Nazis.

Propaganda was a huge thing in which the Nazis used to try and control the people of Germany. Although this was used the majority of the time it was not the most important thing. Terror would have been the main thing in which the Nazi party used to try and control the citizens of Germany. Many things in which the Germans did would have led to us seeing that their main objective was to try and scare people into following the same beliefs as they ~~but~~ believed in. Everything in which the Nazis did would have symbolised that people were ~~at~~ petrified of what the Nazis were going to do next. Many were worried for their own lives, though. Men feeling like this it led to them believing in everything that the Nazis believed in.
